FINE BOURBON FARM —AT— PUBLIC SALE!

Having an option on a larger farm, I will offer to the highest bidder at 11 o'clock; a. m., in front of the court house door, on one of the very best farms in Bourbon County. It contains 108 acres of deep, rich Cane Ridge soil, the best in the world, about 5 1/2 miles east of Paris, Ky., on the Cane Ridge turnpike. There is no waste land on it, and no rocks and every foot of it is good, strong, hemp and tobacco land. The improvements consist of a good 6-room house, a tenant house, one of the best tobacco barns in the county, and all necessary out-buildings. There are two ponds now full of water, a never-failing spring on the farm, and two good cisterns in the yard. A large bearing orchard full of apples, peaches, pears and cherries. There are two mails daily at the door, and a splendid district school near by, while old historic Cane Ridge Church is a short distance away. Terms to suit purchasers.

Monday, December 5, 1904,

If not sold, I will rent it to the highest bidder for one year. There will be 25 acres for hemp, 25 acres for corn and 8 to 10 acres for tobacco, balance in grass.

STOCK AND CROP.

—C. Alexander sold a load of export cattle to Jonas Well, yesterday for 5 cents.

—Sam W. Willis, Jr., son-in-law of the late Capt. Dan Turney, of this city, has sold his farm in Clark county, containing 102 acres to Ben Gay for $12,000.

—Henry Shepard rode Dan R. 2:07 1/2 a mile under saddle on the Columbus, O., track, in 2:12. Mr. Shepard is nearly eighty years old and is the father of H. D. Shepard, Secretary of the Columbus track.

—A farmer in Deerfield, Pa., has raised 37,500 bushels of white potatoes on a farm of 150 acres. Value $20,000. He used 100 tons of fertilizers and half a ton of Paris green to kill potato beetles. The total cost of the crop was $7,000 and the profit was $13,000.

—A Marion county farmer claims to have raised an acre of corn this year that yielded 100 bushels. Some stalks produced as many as four ears of corn, a few having as many as six. The report says the corn was planted very early and was the product of several years careful selection of seed.

—John Freyburger, of Illinois, has bought in neighboring counties about 150 head of cattle, paying from $3.50 to $3.75. Mr. Greyburger buys cattle every year in this section. Last year he purchased a bunch of 875-lb. cattle from January till October when they averaged 1,740-lbs., and brought him $6.65 in the Chicago market.

—This year adds two to the hundred thousand dollar list of winners on the running turf—Irish Lad and African-der, the first horses in a decade to enter the Blue Ribbon class on the American turf. Only 18 in the total list. Mr. J. B. Haggin, of Fayette, and Clay & Woodford, of Bourbon, tie for honor of breeding $100,000 winners—three to the credit of each.

—Ben Kenney, the noted trotting horse driver, has bought for English parties, of James L. Dodge of this city, the four-year-old bay filly Oak Blossom, 2:12 1/4, by Baron Oak, dam Bourbon Wilkes, for $5,000. The filly was trained by Scott Hudson as a 2-year-old, and was third to Katherine A. that year in the Futurity. For the past two seasons she has been driven by Mr. Dodge and was second to Tom Axworthy in a heat at Memphis this fall in 2:10. Trainer Kenney, who engineered the deal for the foreign buyers, believes the filly to be a 2:07 possibility and looks for her to beat everything in her class on the foreign tracks next season. She will be shipped to England this coming week.

Fined For Murder.

W. O. Vaughn, charged with the murder of R. Lee Suter, a member of the Board of Public Safety, of Louisville, at a so-called fishing camp, last July, was fined $750 in the Louisville Criminal Court, Wednesday. His attorney, Aaron Kohn, said he was technically guilty, but no malice was shown.

Mr. Kohn, on behalf of the boy's father, arose and asked the court to set aside the fine and order young Vaughn sent to the School of Reform until he is 21 years of age. Judge Pryor acceded to this request.

Vaughn is only seventeen years old.

HOLDING AN INQUEST.

It is Thought Vice President Parker Committed Suicide.He Died Suddenly in His Office in Cincinnati—At Time of Funeral Former Stenographer Committed Suicide in Chicago.Cincinnati, Nov. 22.—Coroner Weaver Monday began an inquest in the case of C. A. Parker, vice president of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and Pere Marquette railroad, who fell dead in his office here on Wednesday last. No autopsy was held at the time of his death, as no request had been made, and the death certificate gave no cause of death—merely saying, "inquest pending." Dr. S. B. Grimes was the first witness examined. He said he was called while Mr. Parker was dying. He smelled a pungent odor of gas of pench leaves. There was no convulsions. The pupils of the dying man were dilated. The witness asked what Mr. Parker had taken. He heard a voice say, "Don't say anything," and thought it was a woman's voice. There were several persons present.Miss Rose Hagerman, stenographer for Mr. Parker, testified that she saw nothing unusual about him that day.
He had just returned from Chicago, and had dictated some correspondence to her. He gave no appearance of moroseness. She was the only woman present and had no recollection of hearing Dr. Grimes ask what he had taken, nor of saying "Don't say anything."Saturday afternoon, about the time the body of Parker was being buried in St. Louis, Elsie Gesterling, a young woman whose life has been more or less a mystery, but who, it is believed, well knew Parker, committed suicide in her room at the Hotel Vendome, Chicago. She had previously inquired as to the time of the burial of Parker, and it is thought that she timed her self-destruction with that event. Following her death there were revealed relations hitherto unsuspected by Parker's intimate friends but known in his household.Chicago, Nov. 22.—Miss Elsie Ges-terling formerly was one of Parker's stenographers in Denver, Col., and the friendship existing between them was strong enough to cause comment. The result was the girl's removal to Chicago. Correspondence between Parker and the young woman was intercepted by J. W. Parker, the 20-year-old son of the railroad official. In this manner it is said that the young man learned that his father contemplated securing a divorce in order that he might marry Miss Gesterling. Grief over this discovery, and a feeling of shame at the father's entanglement, were the cause, it is believed, of the son's suicide recently in St. Louis.

THE PILGRIMS.

Anniversary of the Signing of Compact Aboard the Mayflower.Boston, Nov. 22.—"Compact day" was observed Monday night by the Massachusetts society of Mayflower descendants, when more than 100 members of the society held a reception and dinner at the Hotel Vendome in celebration of the 284th anniversary of the signing of the compact by the Pilgrims in the cabin of the Mayflower. Among those who made addresses were Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, N. J., and Samuel B. Capen, governor general of the General Society of Mayflower descendants.

A TRIPPLE WEDDING.

Three Brothers and Three Sisters Were Married at the Same Time.Chippewa Falls, Wis., Nov. 22.— Rev. E. M. Nelson, Andrew Nelson and Charles Nelson, and Jessie Johnson, Amanda Johnson and Clara Johnson, three brothers and three sisters, were married at the same time Monday. After the triple ceremony Rev.
C. J. Erdman, who officiated, asked Rev. Nelson, one of the newly married brothers, to marry him to one of the guests.

Collections of Internal Revenue.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The monthly comparative statement of the collections of internal revenue shows that the total receipts for October, 1904, were $20,866,569, a decrease as compared with October, 1903, of $155,105.

Ex-Queen Lili Arrives.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Among the passengers on the steamer Romano, which arrived here Monday from Honolulu were former Queen Liliuokalani and Congressional Delegate Kalaniana-hoale.

Fire at the World's Fair.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—A restaurant and part of the roof of a street car pavilion, near the main entrance of the World's fair grounds, were destroyed by fire Monday. The blaze caused intense excitement.

A Woman's World's Record Made.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—By breaking 967 two and a quarter inch composition discs out of a possible 1,000 from a 25-foot rise at the World's fair, Mrs. Add Topperwein Monday established a woman's world's record for free shooting.

To Decorate President Diaz.

Mexico City, Nov. 22.—The proposition made a few days ago to the chamber of deputies here by a deputation from Oaxaca to present a decoration to President Diaz for military merits has been accepted by the congress.

AN APPEAL TO THE CZAR.

The Zemstvos Sign Petition Praying for a Representative Government.St. Petersburg, Nov. 23.—The final article of the Zemstvos memorial as it will be presented to the emperor is as follows:"In view of the importance and difficulty of the internal and external situation through which Russia is passing, this informal conference expresses the hope that the sovereign power will summon freely elected representatives of the nation in order with their cooperation to obtain for the fatherland an evolution of the state in the direction of establishing a new basis of law for mutual co-operation between the imperial authority and the people."A fresh section is inserted providing that "The personal, provincial and political rights of all citizens in the Russian empire must be equal."Finally, an important and explicit definition is given as to the extent in which the "specially elected body" shall control legislation. This body is "to give effect to legislation, to draw up the budget of revenue and expenditures and to control the legality of the acts of the administration."The serious work of the Zemstvo meeting being accomplished, many of the members are already leaving for their homes. At the last moment the form of the memorial was altered to make it appear an expression of "Hope that it is the wish of the emperor to summon an assembly."With the removal of the idea that the ideal represented opposition to imperial authority every vestige of dissent vanished. The practical result of the meeting as represented by the emperor's response is now of all absorbing interest. The memorial will be presented to Interior Minister Sviatopolk-Mirsky and by him personally to be transmitted to the emperor. The general idea in government circles and even of many of those who participated in the meeting is that it will be unfavorable, but the whole situation is so unprecedented that even the best informed hardly know what to expect. One of the most prominent members of the Zemstvo delegation said:"The general opinion of my colleagues is the reverse of optimistic.
Therefore, it is a mistake to raise hopes that are doomed probably to disappointment, but hope exists. Probably there will be the usual attempt to temporize. We may not get all, but we should get something. The emperor is kind hearted and sincerely desirous of helping the people, if he became convinced where the interests of the people and government lay, but he is surrounded by influences. The court and the imperial family are opposed to anything like the suggestion of a constitution. Of only one thing we are certain—Interior Minister Sviatopolk-Mirsky will present the memorial to the emperor. How far or whether he will endorse it at all is not yet known, but he will place it before his majesty if it costs him his position in the ministry. No matter what the immediate result may be, we have gained a remarkable victory. We have put into concrete form our opinion that the present system in the end must spell ruin or revolution. The emperor knows the character of the men whose names are attached to the memorial. They represented the best blood and thought of the empire. We are not revolutionists. We do not believe the people are prepared for a republic. We support the monarchical idea, but we believe it must be a constitutional monarchy and that the emperor must choose between the moderate program we offer or eventual revolution."

HELD UP A SALOON.

One Man Was Killed and the Bartender Badly Wounded.Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 23.—During a turkey raffle in a saloon late Tuesday night at Columbia Heights, a suburb of Minneapolis, three masked men rode up, dismounted, entered the saloon and covered 14 men with their guns, ordering them to hold up their hands. All obeyed except the bartender, who immediately reached for his revolver. As he did so a shot rang out, the bartender, E. G. Mingo, being shot in the face. This started a general fusillade of shots, one of which instantly killed a young man, Alfred King, 20. The robbers only secured $20 and made for their horses and started toward Minneapolis.

Prize Hounds Burned.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 23.—The barn and dog kennel at Hickory Valley, Tenn., the property of several wealthy eastern sportsmen, have been burned.
Six dogs, among them several of the Avent hounds which had taken many prize premiums in the United States and Canada, were burned.

Medals For Bravery.

New York, Nov. 23.—It is announced by Coroner Berry, of the Bronx, that the medals given by the United States Volunteer Life Saving association for bravery and heroic work during the General Slocum disaster will be presented December 7.

Kidnaping and Extortion Charged.

New York, Nov. 23.—Confessing, the police say, that he is a member of "The Black Hand Society," Antonio Lapello, 28 years old, of West Farms, was locked up in the West Chester police station Tuesday night, charged with kidnaping and extortion.Ordinance Regulating Speed Contests.
New York, Nov. 23.—The ordinance prohibiting speed contests in which any one person shall compete for more than three hours in 24 hours was passed Tuesday by the board of aldermen by a vote of 44 to 9.

MCKINLEY MEMORIAL.

A Design by McGonigle Adopted by the Trustees.Drawings Show a Massive Structure Unlike Either the Grant Monument, New York, or Garfield Monument, Cleveland.New York, Nov. 23.—The national trustees of the McKinley Memorial association, who have in their charge the erection of the McKinley monument in Canton, O., met here and viewed the design presented by the official architect, H. Van Buren Mc-Gonigle.The appointment of the architect, who had been selected by a committee, was ratified by the trustees, after which the plans were minutely inspected. At the close of the meeting it was stated that the sum needed had not been raised and that changes which may be necessary will be made for financial rather than artistic reasons.
The drawings are said to show a massive structure unlike either the Grant monument, in New York, or the Garfield monument, in Cleveland. Its situation on the top of a hill renders a beautiful approach possible and the opportunities offered gave the architect an idea which it is said would require more money than the trustees have in hand.They now have about $550,000, and need about $500,000 more to carry out the plans as they wish. The trustees, after a long discussion during which they endeavored to plan changes in the design to enable their means to cover the expenses and not result in the added expenditures that marked the building of the Grant monument, appointed a committee to confer with the architect regarding the changes, after which they will report to the trustees. The committee consists of Gov. Murphy, New Jersey, and E. W.
Bloomington, Cornelius N. Bliss and William McConway.This committee held their meeting immediately after the trustees meeting. The members of the committee say that they are anxious to be able to start work on the monument next spring.During the meeting resolutions on the death of former Postmaster General Payne were read and adopted and will be sent to Mrs. Payne.The resolutions said that Mr. Payne had not only raised $11,000 in Wisconsin, the average gift being 64 cents, but he had also contributed many thousands himself.The design will not be disclosed to view until it has been completed and finally accepted.Those present at the meeting were Judge William R. Day, president; Gov.
Myron T. Herrick, of Ohio, treasurer; Gov. Murphy, of New Jersey; George B. Cortelyou, chairman of the republican national committee; Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, vice president-elect; William McConway, of Pittsburg; Judge Gary, of Maryland; John G. Millburn, Thomas Dolan, of Philadelphia; Alexander Revell, of Chicago; Gen. Duffield, of Detroit; Col. Lowrey and Judge E. J. Hammond.

"MONTANA METEOR."

An Unsuccessful Flight of Benbow's Airship.St. Louis, Nov. 23.—After remaining in the air for 45 minutes only for a brief period of which it was propelled by its own power, the "Montana Meteor," the airship designed and constructed by Thomas Benbow, of Columbus, Mont., was brought safely to the ground in an open field three miles southeast of the World's fair aerodrome.The airship was navigated by the inventor, who stated to a press representative after the flight that he considered it very successful in the light of the accident that happened to his tank allowed the fluid to escape and rendered his motor useless shortly after he had started the flight.

TRAINS COME TOGETHER.

Fireman Burned to Death and Engineer and Four Passengers Hurt.Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 23.—A special from Hoxie says: Passenger train No. 17, south-bound, from St.
Louis, known as the Hot Springs special on the St. Louis Iron Mountain and Southern railroad, ran into an extra freight train which was taking the siding at Swifton, a small town 20 miles south of here. Harry Wells, fireman on No. 17, was burned to death and Engineer A. DeGuire, of the same train, was badly hurt, his arm being broken. Four passengers were seriously injured.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Remarkable Coincidence Which Would Have Made a Bad Case for Innocent Man."Several years ago I took a late train from Boston to New York," said a man in business in Kansas City, according to the Star. "In the morning I was awakened earlier than usual by the porter, who said that a robbery had been committed on the sleeper during the night and that all the passengers would have to get up.
Some one had taken six $100 bills from the clothing of a gentleman who occupied a berth in the middle of the car. Every section had been taken before he left Boston, and as the train had been almost constantly in motion it seemed certain that the person who had committed the theft was still on the car. The porter said no one had been aboard but the passengers and that none of them had left.
It was proposed to search everybody. A man who had a berth directly opposite from the one who had been robbed objected. He told his name and said anyone might easily find that he was a man of good reputation. In the meantime some officers boarded the car and after a little sweating got the money from the colored porter, who was the guilty one.
Then the passenger who had refused to be searched asked the officers to examine his pockets. This seemed strange, but he insisted. In an inside pocket they found six $100 bills. It was merely a coincidence that he should have the same amount of money as the other passenger had lost, and in exactly the same denominations, but he knew that under the circumstances he could hardly establish his innocence.
How was that for a case of circumstantial evidence?"

WITH DUKES AND THINGS.

Newcomer in Society Who Got Mixed Up with Persons of Title.Mrs. Pordollars has not as yet got over the novelty of riches. At the same time she is not inclined to admit this, and it is her desire, relates London Answers, that the society with which she is now entitled to mix by virtue of her husband's wealth shall think she was born in the purple.Recently she was at a big dinner party, and as she was being piloted from drawing-room to dining-room, she noticed a marble bust on one of the pillars in the hall."Do you know who that is?" she inquired of her cavalier."That is Marcus Aurelius," was the answer."Oh, is it, now?" ejaculated the lady.
"But can you tell me," she added promptly, "whether it is the present markis or the late markis? I do get so mixed up with your dukes and things!"Hats for gentlemen are now worn larger. They must be a size larger than formerly, so as to come down farther on the back of the head of the wearer. That is the latest authorized dispensation. On the whole, it is better than the old style of wearing a head too big for one's hat, as the saying goes. It dispenses with the implied swelling.—Boston Herald.An English writer tells of a poor woman of London who wondered why the Lord permitted her worthless husband to live.
"I suppose," she said, "the Lord has an idea that he'll repent, but I know better."

Good News for All.

Bradford, Tenn., Nov. 21 (Special).— Scientific research shows Kidney Trouble to be the father of so many diseases that news of a discovery of a sure cure for it cannot fail to be welcomed all over the country. And according to Mr. J. A.
Davis of this place just such a cure is found in Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Davis says:"Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed them. They have done me more good than anything I have ever taken.
I had Kidney Trouble very bad and after taking a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I am completely cured. I cannot praise them too much."
Kidney Complaint develops into Bright's Disease, Dropsy, Diabetes, Rheumatism, and other painful and fatal diseases. The safeguard is to cure your kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills when they show the first symptom of disease.A man's curiosity never rivals that of A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term "a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation, loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and dependency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy its health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain." Trial bottle of August Flower, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boesche's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the home—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup, so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T. Brooks.

THE NEW CABINET.

Mr. Moody Consents to Remain as Attorney General.

The Office is to His Liking—It is Reasonably Certain That Secretaries Hay, Taft and Metcalf Will Retain Their Portfolios.

Washington, Nov. 22.—It was announced at the white house Monday that Attorney General Moody has decided to remain in President Roosevelt's new cabinet.

Prior to his transfer from the navy department to the department of justice, Mr. Moody himself authorized the statement that at the conclusion of the present administration he would retire from the cabinet to practice law in Boston. It was stated, in this connection, that Mr. Moody had formed a law partnership that was congenial and advantageous in all respects. This was given as his only reason for retiring from public life. It has been known for some time that the office of attorney general of the United States was entirely to Mr. Moody's liking, and as it was known also that President Roosevelt desired that Mr. Moody should continue in the cabinet, the announcement made Monday was not surprising. It is understood that the president and Mr. Moody are in perfect accord in their ideas as to the conduct of the department of justice, and, in order to carry into effect certain plans which the president and he have formulated, Mr. Moody has decided, on the request of Mr. Roosevelt, to continue in the office of attorney general.

The decision of Attorney General Moody renders it reasonably certain that the heads of six of the great executive departments of the government have been determined on by the president for the next administration. Mr. Hay will continue at the head of the state department; Mr. Taft at the head of the war department; Mr. Metcalf at the head of the department of commerce and labor; Mr. Wilson at the head of the agricultural department, and National Chairman George B. Cortelyou will be postmaster general after the 4th of next March. It is expected also that Mr. Shaw will continue as secretary of the treasury and Mr. Morton as secretary of the navy; but as to these two, no definite information is obtainable. A change is expected in the department of the interior, but Secretary Hitchcock has not let it be known publicly whether he desires to retire or not.

W. H. ELLIS RETURNS.

He Carried Commercial Treaty to King Menelik of Abyssinia.

Washington, Nov. 22.—W. H. Ellis, of New York, who took to King Menelik, of Abyssinia, the commercial treaty negotiated between that country and the United States, was at the white house Monday night and had a talk with the president regarding his mission. He was accompanied to the white house and introduced to the president by Senator James S. Clarkson of New York.

The duty of carrying the treaty to King Menelik originally had been entrusted to Mr. Loomis, the brother of Assistant Secretary Loomis. Mr. Loomis on leaving the United States was accompanied by Mr. Ellis, who was journeying to Abyssinia on private business, and to the latter was delegated the mission undertaken by Mr. Loomis after the latter lost his life off the English coast.

Mr. Ellis presented to the president several weapons of unique and handsome design sent by King Menelik as a gift. He also brought to the United States with him an ostrich and other specimens of Abyssinian animal and bird life, which were taken charge of by Mr. Clarkson on their arrival in New York. They also were sent as gifts to the president by King Menelik. Later they will be removed to the zoological park for their permanent home.

THE JAPANESE PRINCE.

Fushimi the Guest of the Exposition Management.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—As the guest of the exposition management and the Japanese World's Fair commission, Prince Fushimi, cousin of the emperor of Japan, was Monday fete at the World's fair. Pomp and ceremony marked his entertainment. Fireworks, or fire flowers, as they are known by the Japanese, announced the arrival of the prince at the Imperial Japanese gardens, which were gaily decorated.

Wants to Succeed Senator Cockrell. Kansas City, Nov. 22.—Richard C. Kerens, former republican national committeeman for Missouri, who was in this city Monday on business, declared that he was in the race for United States senator to succeed Francis M. Cockrell to stay.

Kansas Official Returns.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 22.—The official figures on the result of the Kansas election were given out Monday night. Roosevelt receives a plurality of 124,582. Hoch (rep.) is elected governor over Dale (dem.), by a plurality of 58,815.

Decided to Affiliate.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—The Philadelphia Presbytery Monday by a vote of 82 to 46 decided in favor of the affiliation of the Cumberland Presbyterian church with the Presbyterian church of the United States.

TO ABOLISH THE MILITIA.

The A. F. of L. Overwhelmingly Defeated a Resolution to That Effect.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Monday's session of the American Federation of Labor was the most exciting held. During the heated debate which followed the unexpected interjection of the question of socialism before the delegates, Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell were charged with being traitors to the cause of labor. These charges and the bitter socialistic debate which followed were caused by the introduction of a resolution by Delegate Victor Berger, of Milwaukee.

Max Hayes, who championed the socialistic doctrine, in a speech so aroused the galleries that they cheered him for several minutes. This caused President Gompers to threaten to clear the hall of all visitors if demonstrations of the kind were repeated. The debate became warmer, and some of the best speeches of the session were made during its course. Criminations and recriminations flew thick and fast. Feeling ran so high that John Mitchell rose in the convention and stated that unless Delegate Victor Berger, of Milwaukee, was able to prove his statement that he (Mitchell) had been a traitor to the workingmen, he must stand before the eyes of all present a convicted liar.

The trouble arose over a printed slip distributed to some delegates which charged Mr. Gompers and Mr. Mitchell with dining with President Eliot, of Harvard. The article in question said the place at which the meal was eaten was an unfair house, and that President Eliot was the man who called the "scab" a hero. It bore the heading, "Are They Traitors?"

The reply of President Gompers was most bitter and impassioned, and the feeling among the delegates was tense. He admitted the attendance upon the dinner, but denied every inference drawn therefrom, and declared that as long as he was connected with the labor movement he would fight against politics being mixed with unionism. Mr. Mitchell made a quiet address, but was accorded the closest attention. He was loudly applauded when he said that he defied any man to point to any act of his which might be interpreted as against the interests of the workingmen.

San Francisco, Nov. 23.—Disputes occupied most of the time of the delegates to the American Federation of Labor in Tuesday's session. There was a ripple of Monday's exciting proceedings when, upon the opening of the session, two resolutions introduced by Delegate Victor Berger, leader of the socialists, were presented for consideration. One of these provided for the abolishment of the militia as it now exists in the United States and the substitution of the Swiss system. The convention overwhelmingly defeated the measure.

The second socialist resolution asked the federation to go on record as being in favor of petitioning congress to pass a bill providing for an old age pension for workmen. This measure was also defeated.

The convention accorded Delegate Victor Berger the floor under a suspension of the rules that he might make a statement regarding the aspirations cast by the contents of a printed slip from his newspaper on President Gompers and John Mitchell. Healing balm was poured on the wounds when Mr. Berger stated that not only did he deny the authorship of the slip declaring that Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell had been traitors to the cause of labor, but that he knew nothing of the charges and was not in sympathy with the same and regretted the incident that caused the ill-feeling of Monday.

John Mitchell thereupon rose and asked to have stricken from the records the statements made by him to the effect that unless Mr. Berger proved his charges, he must stand before the convention stamped as a liar. The convention gave its unanimous consent to this procedure, amid applause and ended the bitter controversy.

LATE POSTMASTER GENERAL.

Bound Copy of Resolutions to His Memory Passed By Postmasters.

Washington, Nov. 22.—A beautifully engrossed and bound copy of the resolutions in memory of the late Postmaster General Henry C. Payne, adopted by the National Association of First Class Postmasters, was presented to President Roosevelt Monday by Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden. A similar copy of the resolutions was presented to Mrs. Payne.

Voted in Favor of Union.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 23.—The Detroit Presbytery Tuesday unanimously voted in favor of the proposed union of the Presbyterian church in the United States and the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

American-German Arbitration Treaty. Washington, Nov. 23.—The American-German arbitration treaty was signed Tuesday at the state department by Secretary Hay and Baron Sternburg, the German ambassador. It is identical with the American-French treaty.

Cattle Butchers May Strike.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Cattle butchers employed in the large plants at the stock yards held a mass meeting Tuesday night and decided to go on strike when called upon to do so by the officials of their union.

JAPS DISHEARTENED.

They Lost 500 Men in an Attack in Manchuria.

Chinese Moving in Large Numbers From East, Northward With Families and Household Goods to Save Them From Japs.

Chefoo, Nov. 21.—The general attack on Port Arthur was resumed November 18 or 19, according to the report of persons arriving here Sunday from Dalny. They say that the Japanese are so secretive that it is difficult in Dalny to learn the true facts. Even the officers detailed to work at the base do not know what their comrades at the front are doing. November 16 a peculiarly heavy explosion shook every ship lying at Dalny. The explosion was ascribed to the blowing up of land mines or a magazine.

Mukden, Nov. 20, via Tien-Tsin, Nov. 22.—Since the Japanese attack on Poutloff hill on the night of November 18, no activity has been apparent. The character of the attack on Poutloff hill is not fully understood beyond the fact that three or four battalions participated. It probably was made on the initiative of the local commander without the consent of headquarters, and as an attack it can only be favorably regarded in the light of a reconnaissance in force. This incident is the most important that has happened since the battle of Shakhe.

Zandagaw, Manchuria, By Courier to Mukden, Nov. 23.—The Japanese lost 500 men in the attacks of November 17 and 18, and were evidently disheartened. When they renewed the attack November 19 the Japanese sent out several battalions from Double Humped hill, but their movements lacked decision. The Russians opened fire from Poutloff (Lone Tree Hill) and neighboring eminences. Shells burst in the midst of the advancing Japanese columns and quickly checked them. The Japanese also tried a turning operation at Chailinda, but there also they were dispersed.

There was a slight encounter November 20. Russian scouts penetrated a short distance into the Japanese lines, but without much result.

During the last two days the Chinese have been moving in large numbers from the east, northward, taking their wives, children and household goods in order to save them from the Japanese. They evince more confidence in the Russians than the Japanese. The Chinese complain that the whole country between the Russian and Japanese lines is laid waste. Not a single dwelling is standing.

Persistent Reports of Kuroki's Death. Berlin, Nov. 23.—The Mukden correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger sends the following: "Reports of the death of Gen. Kuroki persist, in spite of denials and are revived by Chinese coming from the Japanese camps."

SECRETARY TAFT AND PARTY.

They Sailed From Pensacola, Fla., For Panama on the Columbia.

Pensacola, Fla., Nov. 23.—Secretary Taft and his party arrived here at 7:30 Tuesday morning on the Dolphin from New Orleans. They sailed for Panama at noon on the Columbia. The secretary was met by a committee of Pensacola citizens representing the local chamber of commerce. The intention was to give him a view of the harbor and shipping facilities, but his hurried departure prevented this excursion. The secretary received the committee on board the Columbia shortly after 10 o'clock. He was welcomed by a brief address by the collector of the port, John E. Stillman, and responded, expressing his regrets at not being able to view the harbor.

Secretary Taft was accompanied by Mrs. Taft. With him on the Columbia are Adm. Walker, Senor Obaldia, Panamanian minister, and Mrs. Cromwell. The Dolphin took the rest of the party. On account of the slow speed of the Dolphin it is expected five days will be required to reach Colon.

Before leaving Secretary Taft stated that he would return to the United States within 15 days, as he intended remaining in Panama only a short time. He will return by way of Pensacola and take a train here for Washington.

A FARM HAND.

Attempted to Rob a Bank and Badly Wounded the Cashier.

Platte Center, Neb., Nov. 23.—William Holden, a farm hand, during the noon hour entered the Platte Valley bank, demanded the bank's cash, and on the refusal of Cashier Barney Schroeder, to surrender it, shot the latter in the breast, inflicting serious but not a fatal wound. He made his escape in a buggy without securing any money. Holden was pursued and later captured by Sheriff Carrig, after the robber had fired at his pursuers.

Japs Buying Welsh Coal.

London, Nov. 23.—Japan is buying Welsh coal at Cardiff. One purchase of 10,000 tons is recorded and other orders are reported to have been placed. The steamer King Robert, 3,500 tons, has been chartered at Cardiff for Japanese account.

Ten Thousand Russian Deserters.

Vienna, Nov. 23.—Over 10,000 Russian deserters are destitute in Galicia. The fugitives come from all parts of Russia to escape military service. Nearly 2,000 are living on charity in Lemburg, the capital of Galicia.

NOTICE!

The new party law giving me, the the out-going Chairman, the power to call the new County Committee together for organization, I hereby call all members of said committee to meet Monday morning, Nov. 28th, at 10:30 o'clock in the County Court room for organization.
GEO. W. MORROW,
Chairman.

DURING the present drought, land owners should bear in mind that to the fact that Kentucky has been denuded of her forests is due in no small degree her susceptibility to the influence of protracted dry weather. The forests are Nature's reservoirs. When they are destroyed the rainfall is quickly drained from the land and into the streams, where it causes disastrous temporary freshets and is lost. Springs that gushed from the heads of hollows when the forests were standing and only wet-weather springs when the forests have been felled. "Reforestation" is the great need of agricultural Kentucky, and no growing tree or bush should be cut down without good reason.

NICE MACKEREL.—A large consignment of nice mess-mackerel just received. 7th LOUIS SALOSHIN.

THE Republicans who are going around bragging that the Democratic party has been crushed for ever and "wiped out for all time" would do well to recollect that there have been a few other landslides in this country, and that the Democracy has experienced greater defeats only to pull itself together and vanquish its brag-gart foe.

Conditions Reversed.

Plenty of rabbits are to be seen now on the local market, but there are no quail for sale. It is against the law to offer them in this State now, and the only way to have quail on toast is to go hunting and kill the birds yourself or have them given to you. Herebefore the wealthy have been feasting on birds brought in market, and the poor man had to content himself with rabbits, but conditions are reversed now, as the rich man can't buy them and hasn't time to hunt them, while the poor man has.

The Worst That Ever Happened.

The Paris Electric Light plant in this city is about the worst that ever happened. For several nights the patrons of this worn-out plant have been without lights—a show at the opera house was compelled to cancel date after the house was well filled, no preaching could be held in several of our churches, and at the very time the electric lights are most needed is the time the old worn-out machinery breaks down. Let us have some new machinery or stop running all together, so the people can know what to depend on. If we have got to go back to coal oil we may as well do it at once and not worry about electric light. There is no reason for the Paris Electric Light plant not being a paying investment, but as long as it is run on a cheap plan the people may expect just what they are getting.

Let them fight it out and may the best man win. There is big room for improvement in the service in Paris and whoever lands the prize we hope to see him make good. HOPE.

You speak of Hope and point me to a child 'Neath blossom-laden boughs, with face upturned
In golden sunlight free and undefiled With smiling eyes wherein tears never burned.

That is not Hope—that is not Hope, my soul,
'Tis only youth's glad confidence and glee,
What when the crashing storms of sorrow roll?
What when Spring's blossoms lost and scattered be?

Hope—the far light that steals across the gloom, Hope—the one star that shines through prison bars, Though all the rest go crashing down to doom, Unconquered still, she watches 'neath the stars.

Frail yet undying when all else hath died Bent low by pain, blinded by grief and tears, Still through the dark and storm what-e'er befall Still Hope lives on through all the weary years.

Drooping and faint, blinded and far from light
With frail hands to the broken harp she clings, Oh sweetest of all music! through the night
The one sweet note amid the shattered strings.

They do thee bitter wrong who call thee light
And glad of heart. We who were lost in gloom, We who have heard the music through the night
Of death and pain, we who have suffered, know

"Have you forgotten me, Sir Philip?" she questioned him jealously; "were you thinking of—"

"Of home for a moment, my child, of old England, and a better-loved shore farther away. Those are English ships and—"

"And of course I will not let you do that now because—but would you do it for me some day?" she asked anxiously.

"Some day, perhaps, I shall show you," he replied. "I could do harder things than that for you. But come let us seek the dragons in the garden, beauteous dame. 'Tis a long time since we have had an adventure of any sort. Call Josette for your court, and after battle I shall crown you Queen of Love and Beauty again. I can beat you down the stair," he added as they raced away.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE END OF THE PLAY.

THAT night he determined to put in practice the attempt to escape, the first defini-possibility of which had come to him that afternoon. Indeed, it had grown upon him with each passing moment. He lay awake for hours after he had retired and Anatole had been dismissed, waiting until the people in the chateau, except the guards at the gate and the watchmen on the walls, had all gone to sleep. And for a true knight his thoughts at least were recreant, since he dreamed not of the Lady Anne but of freedom.

Toward midnight he arose, dressed himself quickly, and softly stole through the deserted halls until he came to the unoccupied chamber in the round tower. No especial watch was kept upon him, no guards were stationed upon the tower and but few on the seaward side of the chateau.
Moving circumspectly he had met no one nor had he attracted the attention of any sleeper.

He stepped quickly through the great room to the oriel. He stood for a moment on the balcony looking out to sea. It was a bright moonlight night.
Away on the horizon twinkled the faint yellow light of the English ships.
Far below him in the shadow of the cliffs the waves were breaking in sullen splashing upon the splintered shore.

He hesitated as he surveyed the scene; although his purpose was unchanged, he realized as he had not before, that his undertaking was fraught with the greatest danger. He might reach the foot of the cliff alive or he might not. The chances were against him. Things looked differ-ently in the night time. A slip, a misstep, a fall, and death would be the end, death on the rocks 200 feet below, with the white foam for a shroud, and the ebbing tide to bear him far out to sea.

Yet he must needs go on. But as he made ready to descend, his thoughts suddenly went back to the little girl who had been his playmate during the past few weeks. He had almost forgotten her for the moment. Was he a repentant knight thereby? His conscience reproached him. Strange as it may seem, he felt a pang of regret when he realized that once he stepped over the balcony wall and essayed the descent he should be parted from her forever. In death or in liberty they would be equally separated.

The little Rose of Rohans—to see her no more! The thought gave him a peculiar feeling. He paused, reluctant.
He was surprised at himself.

The little maiden with her mingling of childish innocence and womanly charm had grown very dear to him, and the joy he anticipated in soon regaining his liberty was sadly dimmed by the certain sadness of that inevitable parting. Yet the feeling was not strong enough to deter him—then. It was deep enough, however, to give him pause. He lingered, thinking swiftly. It was duty that turned the scale—duty and love are antagonists of old.

He had learned something about the French fleet in Brest and the location of the defenses in the harbor in his rapid ride through the town when he came to the chateau, and from his frequent although apparently cursory examinations of the position from the towers and walls he had learned more.
His information would be of great value. He was an officer of the king, and when the possibility of escape presented itself, at all hazards he must make an effort to reach the ships. The marquis had spoken once or twice about exchange, but nothing had yet come from it and such matters were slow at best.

As it seemed more feasible, as the possibility approached nearer, his desire grew. The detaining image of the French girl grew fainter. Duty, liberty, freedom, action—what child could stand in the way? Therefore again he determined to attempt the descent.
Yet it was a forbidding undertaking now that he had settled upon it. It had seemed easier in the daylight than at night time. The bend of the wall cast the corner in a black shadow, the more intense on account of the brightness of the moonlight beyond.

His mind was in a strange turmoil.
Death—love—liberty—what would be the end? Pshaw! He would think no more, he would do it!

He climbed up on the stone railing of the balcony, turned his back toward the tower, slid along the coping stone until he could feel the angle between the walls with his hand, his shoulders touching either side of the angle. He held firmly to the coping of the balcony, which he determined not to let go of until he was sure of a foot rest.
Then he stretched out his right leg and felt about in the shadow until finally his foot hit the first projection.
He breathed a prayer and prepared to descend. He was glad the angle was in the shadow. He could not see what was beneath him. The black cliffs im-der his feet hid their terrors from him.

SET HER ON HIS KNEE.

He intended to try it with his face outward, his back in the angle, his hands and feet outstretched, clutching at or feeling for every inequality. He was about to let go. Another moment and he had gone, when he felt a familiar little hand laid upon his arm.
"Come back, come back, you will be killed!" whispered a small frightened voice. He was so startled in spite of the quietness of her address that he nearly lost his hold and fell. He recovered himself, however, by a pre-digious effort, and aided by the girl's nervous, clinging hands he drew himself up slowly, and swinging his legs back over the coping landed once more on the solid floor of the balcony. The idea of disregarding her summons did not once occur to him.

"Where you doing this for me?" asked the girl innocently, still clinging to him as if afraid to release him.

"Mademoiselle Anne!" he cried in great surprise and annoyance, "why are you here?" He was trembling violently from his exertions and the tense emotions of the past few moments.

"Why not, Sir Philip? You are here yourself, you see," she answered unsuspiciously, approaching him and laying an innocent hand on his arm and looking steadily at him.

"Yes, but I—come into the tower," he said drawing her back through the window into the room. How her eyes gleamed in the moonlight! What depths were there, what unfathomable mysteries lurked within their shadows!
He had never seen them so before.
They startled him—those eyes so softly tender, so deeply blue. And the exquisite pallor of that face framed in the misty blackness of her floating hair—the girl was beautiful.

Following him into the chamber she stopped unconsciously where the moonlight streamed in through the window.
For the first time he noticed what she wore in the bright illumination. Apparently she was clad in her night-dress with a loose wrapper hastily thrown about her shoulders; her little bare feet gleamed like marble on the stone floor. One hand hung by her side, with the other she instinctively gathered the wrapper across her breast with a movement at once modest yet charming.

"Why, you are in your night-robe!"

he exclaimed in astonishment, but not raising his voice for fear of attracting attention. "Your feet are bare and on these damp stones! You'll catch your death of cold! My dear child!"

He forgot that he was her knight, and stooping down lifted her slender form in his strong young arms. She half-struggled a moment and then acquiesced. What was he to do with her? The caretless room was bare of furniture and, save for themselves, empty. He hesitated, stepped into the window, sat down upon the low sill, and set her on his knee, holding her firmly, carefully, tenderly. She, too, forgot that she was a lady, and nestled against him as any child might have done.

"Now tell me," he whispered—they spoke softly all the time—"why did you come here, Anne?"

It was the first time he had addressed her without a title.

"I do not know," she answered. "I —my room is over there, you know.
I couldn't sleep. I was thinking about the Lady Jehane and her lover the Baron de Croisic—and about you, Sir —Philip."

The pause between the
"sir" and "Philip" was a long one, which sweetened the name in his ears as she continued, "I heard a sound and I thought it might be his ghost. So I came—I hurried too. I had no time to dress."

"Were you not afraid?"

"The marquis says the de Rohans are never afraid. I didn't like it, but I came on tiptoe, and then I saw something black outside on the balcony and I walked over there. I was a little afraid, I think, perhaps because I am part American," she added naively.

"Americans are never afraid, either," interrupted Grafton promptly.

"Well, anyway, I saw it was you and I was not afraid any more. And I watched you stand and look, and then I saw you get over the wall, and then I was fearfully afraid—for you, Philip. I thought you might be killed.
I slipped out and caught hold of you, you came back, and now we are here —together."

There was a long pause. She slipped her arm about his neck and held him as if she feared again that he might fall. He scarcely knew what to say, so he held her close and kept silent until she spoke once more, drawing herself away from him a little as she did so. "I don't think knights carry their ladies around like this, do they?
I don't think it's quite proper, is it?
But these stones are so cold, and I forgot my slippers, I was so anxious.
Is it all right, Sir Philip?"

She wriggled her pretty toes as she anxiously sought for reassurance from her admirer and companion.

"Proper? Of course, and where is Josette?" he answered, glad to get back to the form if not the spirit of the play.

"Asleep," she answered, "the great stupid! She doesn't care whether there are any knights in the world or not.
But what are you doing here? You have not told me yet."

"I—I—I thought I'd try—the tower, you know—the wall—to go down."

"Yes, and was it for me?"

"For the life of him he could not lie to this confiding and innocent little girl."

"Lady Anne," he whispered, "it was for—"

But he did not seem to be able to tell her the truth either.

"Yes, Sir Philip, it was for—"

"For freedom then!" he said desperately.

"Oh! she quivered, "and you were going to leave—me?"

There was a world of reproach in her voice and then silence. Presently he discovered that she was weeping.
Her small frame shook with subdued sobs. The sight alarmed him, pained him deeply; he could not throw off a guilty feeling as he held her closely, trying to soothe and quiet her. He was desperately uncomfortable, yet he saw the scene must be ended if he were to get away. He could meet her in laughter on a common ground, but sobs were foreign to his philosophy.
He had not enjoyed experience of this womanly weakness, which is the weapon of the helpless, and he was powerless before her tears. He could not bear to see her cry, and suppose the marquis should see him, what would he think? Would he not conclude that Grafton had broken faith with him? And yet there was a passing sweetness in the situation too. He had no wish to terminate the interview; he forgot for the moment that he intended to escape that night.

"Now, my dear little girl," he began at last, "it's all play, you know."

This was a most unfortunate statement. All her youthful energies had been bent toward the obliteration of this bitter fact. That is a moment of the greatest sadness when we find out our hardy maintained realities have only been some other person's play!

"It's been play all the time," she sobbed impulsively. "I knew it was so! I tried not to believe it! Josette told me so, and I said she was stupid; but she knew more than I! You have been playing with me from the first, haven't you? Let me go back to my dolls, monsieur, 'tis all I'm fit for."

"She tried vainly to break away.
"My dear child," he replied, still holding her, but utterly at a loss to know what to do or say, "you see I—"

"You never were my really truly knight, were you?" she went on through her tears. "You never cared anything for me; you were just making yourself, weren't you? Making fun of a foolish girl. Oh, monsieur, how could you? And now you are going to leave me!"

"Anne," he said at last, "you are only a little girl, and I am a grown man."

"Yes, I remember I said you were old for a knight, but you were all I had!"
she wailed.

"But do you know," he continued,
"it wasn't all play after all—exactly—and if I lingered there on the balcony—if you saw me pause, it was because I did not wish to leave you.

'Tis truly so. Dear little lady, little playfellow and comrade, I am your knight and will be."

"And is there no other lady in England or America? You said 'no' once, but was it true?"

"It was true and it is true; there is no lady in England or America, or anywhere in the world, for me, except in this little corner of France, and if I hesitated about going away, it was for you, but don't you see? My duty —I am an English officer. My king is at war with yours. I must go back!"

"You love your country, monsieur, more than—but you do not love me at all, do you?" she asked piteously.

"Of course I do," he answered promptly. "I love you very much indeed; you are the sweetest little girl I know."

"Oh, the marquis loves me that way, and Jean-Renaud, and Josette, and—"

"It's different with me, you know.
Not like that at all. You see, men do their duty because they ought to, and they love people because they have to."

"Do you have to love me, Sir Philip?"

"Yes, and I am glad to, my dear little girl. I am afraid if I stay here any longer and you grow any older—"

He hesitated; was he actually about to propose to this child? He resumed, rather tamely, "I had to go away, you see. Now let me go, and some day I will come back to you and—"

"Put me down, monsieur," she said gravely, with one of those swift changes of mood which he had often noticed before. "I insist upon it! There, you may go now, but you will never come back to me. I know it. You will be somebody else's knight, and I—"

Her little head dropped forward. He lifted his hand to her chin, turned her face upward and kissed her, and then drew her nearer to his breast as he held her dear to a little sister.
Yet it was not such a kiss as a brother might have given, nor was it a sister whose lips met his own. It was the first time he or any man had kissed her, save her grandfather, whose love did not express itself in frequent caresses. She was but a child, yet something thrilled and leaped in her heart at his touch, and there was a faint echo of her feeling, a brief response to her heart-throb, in his own breast.

But in a moment she broke from his arms—never again could he hold her so as before. She stood and looked at him from those glorious eyes of hers, and time, in one swift moment, in the meeting kiss, wiped out the difference in years between the two. His thoughts changed as he gazed upon her. A new idea came to him. In a few years she would have grown—why not?

"Monsieur," she said at last, and the change in her was evidenced by the gravity and the added dignity of her manner, "you have kissed away the child. I am a woman; you cannot go now."

"Why not, Mademoiselle Anne? I can love you—from a distance—for I swear, child or not, I love you—and I can come back."

Love has nothing to do with this, monsieur, now; I am a French woman.
You must not go; you shall not!
You are a prisoner. The castle is mine until he returns. I am the chateau.
I could never look my grandfather in the face again if I allowed you to escape."

Postmaster General Payne is a master of the epigram. He demonstrated that fact recently when he was questioned about some charges that had been brought against one of the officials of his department. Shrewd political organizer and manager for many years, one of the kitchen cabinet of several administrations, systematic, quick and unhesitating in his own private business policies, his command of incisive speech on occasion and aptitude at epigrammatic replies are not to be wondered at.

"It is not clear who brought these charges," said Mr. Payne.

"They were worked up by Charlotte Smith," suggested his interviewer. "She is a reformer who is a familiar figure at the capitol."

"Charlotte Smith?" I repeated the post-master general. "Yes, I know her.
Fathers everything; mothers nothing!"

An Orphan Defined.

The word "orphan" appeared in the Sunday school lesson. Miss Ida V.
Stamps asked if any of the little boys in the class knew what an orphan was.
There was no response. Thinking to help the little fellows to search out the right answer, Miss Stamps, the teacher said:

"Why, children, I'm an orphan; now can't you tell me what an orphan is?"

Up went the hand of a boy.

"All right, Johnnie," said the teacher, "that's a good boy. You tell us what an orphan is."

"An orphan," replied the little fellow, without the slightest hint of a smile and with deep earnestness—"an orphan is a young lady who wants to get married and can't."—Silas Xavier

Senator Proctor had seated himself at the table in a small western hotel and was critically holding his tumbler to the light. The landlording, desirous of pleasing his distinguished patron, came hurrying with a pitcher of water.
Mr. Proctor, however, was in no haste, and, circling the tumbler in his fingers, said:

"I enjoy this; it reminds me of the Sabbath."

"Because everything is so quiet about here?" suggested the landlording.

"No; but this privilege of looking

FASHIONABLE FINERY.

The front panel is quite the newest thing in skirts.

Most of the small hats are tricornee or boat-shaped turbans.

The crown is quite distinct from the brim in the new turbans.

Ribbon of two contrasting shades is very smart for trimming tailor hats.

Coq de roche is most effective as a relief note with gray-green and brown.

The plush coat, put away years ago, is to make its reappearance this winter.

Agilettes are to be much worn and are of spangled and jetted tulle for turbans.

Lovely poke bonnets trimmed with ostrich tips are shown for wee maidens.

Lots of fire brown and spinach green will be exploited in panne velvet and net.

This new "yetta" skin is not nearly so becoming as the soft, long-haired furs.

It would be difficult not to find at least one becoming color in the approved list.

As long as big sleeves remain in vogue the short cape garment will be to the fore.

Toques made of velvet leaves and fruit are very modish, particularly the vine and leaves of the muscatel grape.

"WHACKS"

And What They Mean.

When Old Mother Nature gives you a "whack," remember "there's a reason," so try and say "thank you," then get about finding what you have done to demand the rebuke, and try and get back into line, for that's the happy place after all.

Curious how many highly organized people fail to appreciate and heed the first little, gentle "whacks" of the good old Dame, but go right along with the habit, whatever it may be, that causes her disapproval. Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea or other unnatural treatment of the body, until serious illness sets in or some chronic disease.

Some people seem to get on very well with those things for awhile, and Mother Nature apparently cares but little what they do.

Perhaps she has no particular plans for them and thinks it little use to waste time in their training.

There are people, however, who seem to be selected by Nature to "do things." The old Mother expects them to carry out some department of her great work. A portion of these selected ones oft and again seek to stimulate and then deaden the tool (the body) by some one or more of the drugs—Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea, Morphine, etc.

You know all of these throw down the same class of alkaloids in Chemical analysis. They stimulate and then depress. They take from man or woman the power to do his or her best work.

After these people have drugged for a time, they get a hint, or mild "whack," to remind them that they have work to do, a mission to perform, and should be about the business, but are loafing along the wayside and become unfitted for the fame and fortune that waits for them if they but stick to the course and keep the body clear of obstructions so it can carry out the behests of the mind.

Sickness is a call to "come up higher." These hints come in various forms. It may be stomach trouble or bowels, heart, eyes, kidneys or general nervous prostration. You may depend upon it when a "whack" comes it's a warning to quit some abuse and do the right and fair thing with the body.

Perhaps it is coffee drinking that offends. That is one of the greatest causes of human disorder among Americans.

Now, then, if Mother Nature is gentle with you and only gives light little "whacks" at first to attract attention, don't abuse her consideration, or she will soon hit you harder, sure.

And you may also be sure she will hit you very, very hard if you insist on following the way you have been going.

It seems hard work to give up a habit, and we try all sorts of plans to charge our ill feelings to some other cause than the real one.

Coffee drinkers when ill will attribute the trouble to bad food, malaria, overwork and what not, but they keep on being sick and gradually getting worse, until they are finally forced to quit entirely, even the "only one cup a day." Then they begin to get better, and unless they have gone long enough to set up some fixed organic disease, they generally get entirely well.

It is easy to quit coffee at once and for all, by having well made Postum, with its rich, deep, seal brown color which comes to the beautiful golden brown when good cream is added, and the crisp snap of good, mild Java is there if the Postum has been boiled long enough to bring it out.

It pays to be well and happy for good old Mother Nature then sends us her blessings of many and various kinds and helps us to gain fame and fortune.

Strip off the handicaps, leave out the deadening habits, heed Mother Nature's hints, quit being a loser and become a winner. She will help you sure if you cut out the things that keep you back.

"There's a reason," and a profound one.

CLARE'S HOLIDAY

By EDITH M. BLANCHARD

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

OUTSIDE, the snow lay thick and white. Inside, a young girl stared out upon it with unseeing eyes. Some fine lace that she was making had slipped unheeded to her lap, and she did not notice the tiny blasts of cold that swept in through the cracks near the window, sometimes with such force that they stirred the locks of her rich brown hair.

For a long time she sat thinking; then, suddenly, a sleigh dashed rapidly by, leaving a confused picture of splendid horses, flashing harnesses, fur robes and tinkling bells. She drew back quickly; but not before the man in the sleigh had seen her and lifted his cap. With a tinge of color in her cheeks she picked up the lace and began to work rapidly, just as the door was thrown open.

"Well, Clare, working as hard as ever, I see!" was the visitor's greeting. She was very fashionably dressed. Even her voice had the latest fashionable drawl. Clare thought involuntarily of a fashion plate as she helped remove the costly furs and expensive hat.

"I passed the senator as I came in," she remarked, with a sharp, inquisitive glance, seating herself on the wide window seat, where she could see everything inside or outside the room. A trifle more color came to Clare's cheeks.

"Yes, I saw his drive by," she answered. Then there was silence. The visitor drummed on the window pane.

"Well," she finally inquired, "haven't you anything to tell me? Isn't it settled yet? Haven't you seen the folly of sticking here, when you might have more money than you could spend?"

"And a disreputable old man thrown in!" flashed Clare. "Now, let's not go all over the old ground again. We have done it so often before, you know, with no good results. I have as much right to my opinions as you have to yours. You made your own choice, and took wealth and position—and the man! But why bother about me? You have everything you want."

"Yes, and some things I don't want—among them a sister who disgraces me!"

Clare looked up proudly. "You will apologize for that word, or you and I will never meet again," she said, calmly. Mrs. Singleton saw the danger signal in her eyes.

"Oh, I will, of course!" she exclaimed. "But I really do not know what word to use in its place. You are the one thing that keeps me back, socially; every once in a while people mention my 'seamstress sister.' Ever since Lady Herford heard it she has taken pains to inquire for you every time we meet. I was not invited to her last dinner, either, and I am sure it was on account of you," she finished, in an aggrieved tone.

"Poor Julia!" exclaimed her sister, half mockingly. "I am not a seamstress. But don't you think they would better call me one than to say I sold myself for gold?"

Mrs. Singleton shrugged her shoulders.

"If you are going to get personal, I think I'll go," she said, rising. "But, Clare, if you won't say 'yes' to the senator, please, oh, please leave all this and live with me. Perhaps society will take you back after a while."

A peculiar smile flitted across Clare's face.

"Do you really think so?" she inquired. Mrs. Singleton pondered.

"Yes, I do," she finally said. "Of course it will mean a lot of hard work; they won't forget for a long while. But I think it might be managed."

Then Clare laughed outright, and laughed again at Mrs. Singleton's surprise.

"Let me see, Julia," she said gently. "It is now six months since father died and I came here to earn my own living by painting and making lace. Yes, I know I refused to share your home, and insisted on coming to this 'unfashionable street.' And this, you say, has cost me my position in society? Will you open that top drawer of the desk? See what is there?"

"Why, it is full of letters—invitations!" exclaimed Mrs. Singleton, doing as she was requested. "What! Do you mean to say you've been receiving them all the time?"

"Several every day," carelessly.

"And you never told me! You always were the oddest person I ever saw, and—what's this? The Hon. George Verner's dinner and Louis Beresford's!" she exclaimed, enviously.

"Lady Herford's, too!" she almost screamed. "And you refused invitations that half the town would have given anything to get! Are you crazy?"

"No, not quite," laughed Clare. "But I think I shall be if you do not go soon, Julia. You get me all 'muddled up,' as old mammy used to say, and I can't work so well. Here, let me hold your coat."

Mrs. Singleton dressed silently. She was too dazed to speak. As she started to go she brightened up for a moment.

"Of course they knew you would decline," she explained, "and they invited you just to spite me. Good-by, dear!"

"And the world that is calling me to return! Never!" she exclaimed aloud. "I was undecided before Julia came; now, I am sure of myself. It is clear that I can never live with her, nor allow her to help me; and better live here alone forever than marry the senator, or any other man simply for money. There, I will settle that matter at once."

Plunging her work aside she crossed to the desk and wrote rapidly. Then she ran down the stairs and dropped the note into a letter box just across the street. When she returned she waltzed gaily around the room. She had acquired the habit of talking to herself, for at time it was a relief to hear even her own voice break the silence.

"Good-by to the senator forever," she sang. "Farewell to his money and all that it can buy! Why, I believe I feel better already. I believe it was that money that was making me blue. Now I will work hard; for I like work and the life here—all but Sundays and holidays—they drag!"

Thanksgiving day had just passed. Clare had spent it alone, trying to think of a long list of reasons for being thankful. Some way the list was rather short. Her mind had persisted in veering off to a certain young man with boyish face and laughing eyes—a friend of long ago. She kept wondering why he had gone away so suddenly. At times she had thought that his eyes told a story that would have been worth listening to; but he had gone without a word. Since she had been living alone she had thought of him often.

The senator, and all the advantages he could offer, being definitely refused, Clare grew brighter, and the tired look left her face. She often sang light-heartedly, as the days flew on toward Christmas. All invitations were refused, and on Christmas morning she arose as usual and began to paint. Soon she threw down her brush in despair.

"It's no use; I can't to-day!" she said, mournfully. "I do really hate holidays. Everything will go all right to-morrow, but for to-day—I must give it up!"

To pass the time away she began to look through some of her father's old books; but her mind still wandered off to the laughing blue eyes. She remembered, with a start, that it was just one year since she had seen him. There had been company—she had slipped away to the library for a stolen glimpse of a book she was reading. He had followed and they had a happy half hour together. Then some one called, and when at last she returned the room was empty. She had never seen him since. What was it she had been reading? Oh, yes, "Vanity Fair!" She looked through the books, and when she found it touched it tenderly. They had discussed it together! Someway, the laughing blue eyes seemed very near her now.

Suddenly something white and bulky fell from the book to her lap. She caught her breath as she saw that it was a letter with an unbroken seal. She knew the writing—and her hands trembled. In a flash she saw it all. He had left it in the book she had been reading, thinking she would find it at once. And she had not opened the book since! As she read, tears filled her eyes; it was the outpouring of a boyish soul, revealing his love and asking her to wait. When she reached the end she bowed her head and wept tears of joy.

"And the world that is calling me to return! Never!" she exclaimed aloud. "I was undecided before Julia came; now, I am sure of myself. It is clear that I can never live with her, nor allow her to help me; and better live here alone forever than marry the senator, or any other man simply for money. She often sang light-heartedly, as the days flew on toward Christmas. All invitations were refused, and on Christmas morning she arose as usual and began to paint. Soon she threw down her brush in despair.

"It's no use; I can't to-day!" she said, mournfully. "I do really hate holidays. Everything will go all right to-morrow, but for to-day—I must give it up!"

To pass the time away she began to look through some of her father's old books; but her mind still wandered off to the laughing blue eyes. She remembered, with a start, that it was just one year since she had seen him. There had been company—she had slipped away to the library for a stolen glimpse of a book she was reading. He had followed and they had a happy half hour together. Then some one called, and when at last she returned the room was empty. She had never seen him since. What was it she had been reading? Oh, yes, "Vanity Fair!" She looked through the books, and when she found it touched it tenderly. They had discussed it together! Someway, the laughing blue eyes seemed very near her now.

Suddenly something white and bulky fell from the book to her lap. She caught her breath as she saw that it was a letter with an unbroken seal. She knew the writing—and her hands trembled. In a flash she saw it all. He had left it in the book she had been reading, thinking she would find it at once. And she had not opened the book since! As she read, tears filled her eyes; it was the outpouring of a boyish soul, revealing his love and asking her to wait. When she reached the end she bowed her head and wept tears of joy.

Christmas evening was spent in writing page after page of explanations. There were so many that the letter was much over weight.

The last days of the year slipped rapidly by, and no reply came. Clare began to look anxious. All sorts of fears beset her; she could not account for his silence. Finally came the last day of the year—and still no reply.

"Another holiday to-morrow!" Clare groaned. "How I hate them!" She retired early and cried herself to sleep, dreaming all night of deaths, sickness, murders, fires and many horrible, impossible things. A vigorous knocking awoke her early in the morning.

"Telegram, ma'am!" said a voice. Clare dressed as hastily as possible, a terrible fear at her heart. Her dreams must have meant trouble of some kind, and she felt that it had come. Trembling, she tore open the envelope.

"Happy New Year for us both. Will arrive to-day. Letter just received."

"FRANK."

"Oh, I wish I had never said such horrid things about holidays!" exclaimed Clare, with solemn joy.

Sugar-Gloss on Butter.

A singular method of protecting rolls of butter from deterioration due to outside influences is practiced in Germany. It consists simply in coating the butter with a glaze of melted sugar laid on with a soft brush. The surface of the butter is slightly melted and a protective varnish is formed. The process has recently been employed on a large scale in England.

As an encouragement to school children to be regular and punctual in their attendance at school, the Surrey county (England) education committee has decided to give them picture postcards bearing views of places of historic and local interest in the county.

ROBIN PICKS ODD MATE.

Has Lived in Perfect Peace in Same Nest with a Sparrow for Three Years.

It is a singular little family that has made its home for the last three years on Vienna street, in Cleveland. It is composed of a robin and a sparrow, who live in a nest in a maple tree. For three summers an invalid in the house near by has had endless enjoyment watching the happy little family.

The family is singular in that the representatives of two species of birds supposed to be deadly enemies live together in harmony. Some three months ago the invalid, watching from her chair at the window, saw Miss Robin hopping cheerfully about in the back yard. She was all unmindful of the cat, who was crouched for a spring on the top of the fence. Mr. Sparrow saw the cat, however, and just in the nick of time swooped down and warned Miss Robin of her danger.

Their friendship began from that moment, and evidently soon ripened into love, because the invalid noticed a week or so later that they were occupying the same nest. Each season since they have returned to the domicile. The sparrow evidently goes south for the winter with his mate.

READY TO FIGHT FOR PEACE

Andrew Carnegie Offers to Aid League of Nation's Powers to Prevent Wars.

Andrew Carnegie has sent from Skibo castle in Scotland the following signed statement on President Roosevelt's promise to a deputation to take the initiative in summoning The Hague peace tribunal to meet again:

"The only thing needed to banish war is to get such a combination of the leading powers as would be able to enforce peace and say to the mad disputants what Randolph said to Norval and Glenvalon in the play of 'Douglas.' He rushed between the two when they were fighting and cried: 'Hold! I command you both. The one that stirs makes me his foe.' President Roosevelt has acquired lasting fame for leading the five strong powers to The Hague tribunal in the Venezuela case, and he will be immortal if he succeeds in forming a league of powers ready to fight for peace, as I am at all times, if necessary."

BUFFALOES ON INCREASE.

The Latest Census Places Number at 1,233, or 29 More Than Were Reported Four Years Ago.

A census of all the American buffalo, or bison, now living has been completed by Mark Sullivan, of Boston. He conducted a similar census by mail four years ago, and found that the number of bison then in existence numbered 1,204. The latest census fixes the number at 1,233, an increase of 29 in four years.

The largest group is in the Capparho-Allard herd, on the Cap Flathead Indian reservation, Montana. In this are 330 head. The next largest is the wild herd west of the Great Slave lake, northwest Canada, numbering 200.

The James Philip herd, Fort Pierre, S. D., numbers 100, and the J. J. Hill group, at Cardigan, Minn., 18.

In the Banff, Rocky Mountain park, are 45, in the Yellowstone park 70, at Winnipeg, Denver and other city parks 30, and at the Goodnight ranch, Texas, 50.

Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally.

If you know of any young lady who is sick, and needs motherly advice, ask her to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., who will give her advice free, from a source of knowledge which is unequalled in the country. Do not hesitate about stating details which one may not like to talk about, and which are essential for a full understanding of the case.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N. J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular."

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Fannie Kump.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The pains in my back and womb have all left me, and my menstrual trouble is corrected. I am very thankful for the good advice you gave me, and I shall recommend your medicine to all who suffer from female weakness."—MISS FANNIE KUMPE, 1922 Chester St., Little Rock, Ark. (Dec. 16, 1900.)

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure any woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, nervous prostration, and all forms of woman's special ills.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

The reason W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the greatest sellers in the world is because of their excellent style, easy fitting and superior wearing qualities. If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makers and the high-grade leathers used, you would understand why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoes on the market to-day, and why the sales for the year ending July 1, 1904, were $6,263,040.00.

W. L. Douglas guarantees their value by stamping his name and price on the bottom. Look for it—take no substitute. Sold by shoe dealers everywhere.

SUPERIOR IN FIT, COMFORT AND WEAR.

"I have worn W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes for the last twelve years with absolute satisfaction. I find them superior in fit, comfort and wear to others costing from $5.00 to $7.50."—J. S. McGUIRE, Dept. Coll., U. S. Int. Revenue, Richmond, Va.

W. L. Douglas uses Corona Calfskin in his $3.50 shoes. Corona Calf is conceded to be the finest Patent Leather made. Fast Color Eyelets used exclusively.

Compelled To Leave College.

One of the most remarkable instances on record of punishment to a student for disloyalty to his college was administered to Homer A. Jordan, a student at the Kentucky University, at Lexington, Wednesday morning. Jordan attended an entertainment Tuesday night at which were present several young ladies from State College, and, just to please one of the fair charmers, he took off the crimson ribbon of the university and pinned a strip of white and blue, emblematic of State College, on his coat lapel. Some of the other K. U. students reported the incident at school the next morning and Jordan was sent for to come to chapel. He refused to comply with the request, when a body of students were sent out to find him and bring him before the student body in chapel. Upon being brought into chapel Jordan was made to mount the platform and publicly apologize to the entire student body and he was then subjected to a cold-water ducking under the water hydrant on the college campus. After submitting him for several minutes to this torture the students told Jordan he would have to take his departure from the school as they did not care to have a traitor in college. Seeing that the students were sincere in their talk the unfortunate young man repaired to his room, secured all of his clothes and other belongings and immediately left the city. He told several of his friends that he was going to his home in Virginia. "It could not be learned what action would be taken by the faculty over the occurrence."

"The Burgomaster."

Pixley and Laders' greatest musical comedy success, "The Burgomaster," will be the strong attraction at the Grand on December 7th. These authors are responsible for the "Prince of Pilsen," "King Dodo," "Woodland," and other successes. Never have author and composer collaborated to better advantage than in "The Burgomaster." The music is the most tuneful of any of the light operas that have been brought out in this country for the past ten years. The pleasant, easy philosophy of the old Burgomaster always appeals. The company this season is a notable one. It is headed by the tactful and successful comedian, Oscar L. Figman, whose work in the character of "The Burgomaster" has made him the most talked about of the younger comedians of the day. Others in the large cast are Charles Sharp, Oscar B. Ragland, Fred Bailey, Geo. McKissock, A. W. Hutchins, Olga von Hatzfeldt, Louise Brackett, Harriett Sheldon, Dorothy Rae, Mae Franklin, and the Sisters Lockhart.

BLACK CAKE.—Before you make cakes for the holidays see me. I have everything that goes in a black cake, or any other kind of cake. Everything fresh.

For Safe Keeping.

Spirited from the Lexington jail at 4:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Garfield Smith and John and Ed. Taylor were taken under a heavy guard to Yarnalton Station, several miles from that city, and there put aboard a C. & O. train at 5:30 o'clock. The negro "white dog hunters" who murdered William Moore when they attacked a company of white men in a saloon Sunday night will be kept in the Louisville jail until the Lexington authorities believe it safe for them to appear for trial there. For two nights the strength of peace officers and militia alone served to overawe mobs that formed.

After the above was in type we notice that County Judge Bullock decided that the Fayette jail was as safe as any jail in the country and the prisoners will remain therein until their trial. The above was only a newspaper lie.

Pest in Kentucky.

A circular issued by the State Board of Health says in part:

"Since January, 1898, smallpox has prevailed, more or less extensively, in every county in Kentucky, with a total of 25,000 cases and 300 deaths, and costing over $500,000, besides an estimated loss from interference with business and travel of something over $1,500,000."

Owing to the approach of cold weather a warning is given for general vaccination.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for croup, whooping cough, grip, pneumonia and consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c, $1.

Quick Arrest.

J. A. Guldage, of Verbena, Ala., was twice in the hospital from a severe case of piles, causing 24 tumors. After the doctor's and all remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve arrested further inflammation and cured him. It conquers aches and kills pain. 25c at Oberdorfer's, the druggist.
